

SCORESheet

By James Zug

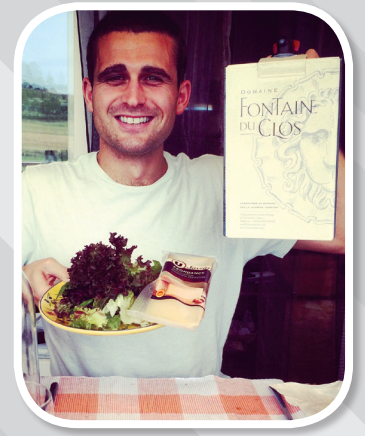

The youngest of six kids, Mike Lewis picked up squash at age thirteen in Santa Barbara under the eye of pro Robert Graham. He played four years of varsity squash at Dartmouth, ending up at No. 4 on the ladder and captain his senior year. After graduating in 2011, Lewis worked at Bain Capital in Boston doing venture capital work. He continued to play squash before and after work at the University Club of Boston; in 2013 he joined the PSA and squeezed in a half dozen pro tournaments on the East Coast over the next season. At the end of May 2014, Lewis left his job at Bain and went on tour full-time. He's been training, giving exhibitions, leading clinics and playing in squash tournaments all around the world ever since. He's also launched whentojump.com, a website that features inspirational, first-person stories from people who have left comfortable jobs to chase a passion.

Here is a number-crunching summary of the first eighteen months, between June 1, 2014 and December 1, 2015, of Mike Lewis' life on the open road.
